impairment In rural communities in developing countries, especially sub-Saharan Africa, visual impairment is the leading cause of blindness. In some cases, it can also lead to visual impairment.
Causes Glaucoma is the most common cause of visual impairment, and cataract is the leading cause of blindness in the world. Optical correction Corrective spectacles can be made to improve vision in those who have reduced vision. A specific letter chart should be prescribed to the patient. It should be printed and the patient should be instructed in its use. Early treatment can improve the prognosis of glaucoma. Surgical removal of cataract can improve vision in those who have had cataract surgery. Eye medicine

Each of the major eye diseases has a different approach to management. For each of these conditions the treatment goals are prevention of further impairment and improvement in visual acuity.

Glaucoma Primary glaucoma The goal of treatment in primary glaucoma is to keep the eye pressure, and therefore intraocular pressure, at or below a target level, which varies depending on the stage of the disease.

Secondary glaucoma In the management of secondary glaucoma, the target is to obtain a reduction in intraocular pressure to a level at which both visual acuity and the quality of life improve. This may be achieved with topical medications only, with laser treatment or trabeculectomy surgery. Open angle glaucoma In the management of open angle glaucoma, the goal is to maintain the level of intraocular pressure required to maintain a stable visual field. In an effort to achieve this, the glaucoma may be treated with medications that lower the intraocular pressure, or the eye may be shunted with a glaucoma drainage device. Cataract For those with cataract, surgical removal is the primary treatment. Vision can be improved with glasses or contact lenses
